

Kenneally Claims Victory in Great Debate

Despite not being present at last Sunday's election debate Mathew Kenneally has claimed a crushing victory over John Howard and Kevin Rudd.

"I think it was my closing statement that sealed it for me" said a smug Kenneally. "Two minutes of absolute silence: exactly what the people want from their politicians".

There has been speculation that Mr Kenneally was somehow involved in the sabotage of the worm broadcast, a claim he resolutely denies. "I was much too busy stacking the Channel Nine audience to have time for worm tampering!" said Kenneally.

On the question of further debates, Kenneally issued a challenge. "I am willing to debate any and all candidates, every single night until the election, with Rove McManus as host, in front of a panel of 5th Graders". Kenneally said that if nobody was willing to debate him, he would simply debate himself for the rest of the campaign. "I will have a free and frank exchange of ideas between myself".

Fortunately for Kenneally, Lynn Allison and Bob Brown have expressed interest in further debates. Joe Hockey also showed interest but was turned down. Kenneally insisted, "I'm a serious candidate, I have to have some standards!"
